Bellavance causes student uproar at Forum

by Stephanie Campbell, news writer

Many faculty members and administrators were very eager to resolve conflicts and answer questions from approximately 60 people attending the Faculty/Student Forum held April 15.

Discussed through the thick air of tension was the matter concerning Professor Bravman's termination. Questions were directed to both Dr. Beebe, dean of Perdue School of Business, and President Bellavance.

Bellavance dismissed questioning by standing and claiming, "The decision is over with."

Students argued that they never had a chance to be heard before the decision was made.

Bellavance countered with, "I have heard you. I understand what you are saying. I am sorry that we're into this kind of thing."

"I'm sorry we're into this kind of thing," said President Bellavance at the Forum.

One student asked Bellavance whether or not he's actually met the man in question. When Bellavance responded, almost inaudibly, that he has met Bravman, the students were in an uproar with disagreement; some students even shouted, "Bullshit!"

Bellavance continued to apologize, but he didn't give the students any relief from their frustration.

Beebe attempted to explain the expectations of faculty members by describing qualifications from the faculty handbook. He emphasized three aspects that are considered: teaching, enhancement of intellectual actions and service to the community and the business school. He also pointed out that 80% of student credit hours need to be covered during the day by professors with Ph.D's.

Students became very agitated over this and could not understand how Bravman lacked these qualifications if he attempted to change the amount of classes he teaches and the times they are taught.

Beebe was unsuccessful in commenting on this because he was overwhelmed with questions from angry students.

The students expressed that this matter is not solely about Bravman, but about teaching

Students express mixed feelings about Jeans Day

by Janet Parenti, news writer

As students were dressing last Thursday, they faced the potentially difficult question of whether or not they should wear jeans.

Apparently, many students experienced a strong aversion to denim that morning because the vast majority wore dress pants, sweats, skirts and even shorts despite the cool rainy day.

Thursday, the Gay and Lesbian Alliance (GALA) sponsored its second annual Jeans Day.

Jeans Day, a national event, allows people to show their support for homosexual civil rights by wearing jeans.

In spite of the low number of students who wore jeans, many students who were not willing to support GALA visually were willing to do so verbally.

Several people said that they were displeased with the organization's choice of jeans as a symbol of support.

Junior Valerie Lloyd, who wore jeans and a jean jacket, said, "I wore jeans today, but I'm not sure what it's all about. I have no problems with GALA, but I think they should have chosen something a little less common than jeans so that it is clear whether or not people are supporting their cause."

Patti Malesh, freshman, who also wore jeans and a jean jacket said, "I think Jeans Day is a good idea because there's no negative aspect of it. Either you wear jeans and support them or you don't wear them and you're silent."

One of the co-facilitators of GALA explained that he thinks jeans are an appropriate means to show support because almost everyone owns a pair of jeans.

He said that he realizes some students automatically assume people wearing jeans on Jeans Day are gay, lesbian or bisexual.

"But with Jeans Day, people wearing jeans get to feel how it is to be different from normal society for at least one day," he said.

Precisely because of this, many students chose not to wear jeans last Thursday.

"I didn't feel like dealing with everybody's mean comments," said freshman Mandi Flater.

One student said, "In my philosophy class there was a guy wearing jeans and the whole time the other guys in class were making fun of him because of it. I don't even think he knew it was Jeans Day."

Junior Steve Kampen said about GALA's use of jeans, "I think it's a cheap attempt at support."

"I don't have anything against gays," said sophomore Marc Barker, "But I think we should have Black Shirt Friday as a protest about the way GALA used Jeans Day."

Students responded to Jeans Day with shorts, skirts and sweats.

In response to student attitudes he observed on Jeans Day, sophomore Neil Carr said, "I wish my friends would think about this more. Jeans Day is about human and civil rights that everyone deserves, it's not about proclaiming your sexual orientation."

Freshman Jennifer Souders said, "Everybody should be willing to accept people's freedoms."

Another topic that was discussed at length was the meal plan.

Students were interested to know why the university does not use a point system, or why students cannot save unused meals for another person or time.

Carmen Di Sylvestro, assistant director of University Dining Services, explained that each student on a 19 meal plan, for example, pays for 14.5 meals. He gave the figure of $4.33 per meal saying, "It's not a whole lot of money when you're talking about variety and quality."

Di Sylvestro was also questioned about the expense of food in the Gull's Nest.

He said that the Gull's Nest is an alternative that allows students to carry out, which is extremely costly.

Also brought up was the fact that students with the 15 meal plan cannot use their meals for the weekend.

Di Sylvestro responded by saying that it would be similar to operating as a restaurant and that is more expensive.

"Our main goal is to keep costs low," he said.

He also pointed out that about $200,000 is wasted each year.

Di Sylvestro introduced to the forum the plans for the new dining hall, which they expect to have ground breaking within one to one and a half years.

Students can expect the new dining hall to be in a "food court" concept and the point system will be used. It will be located where the president's home now stands.

Director of Public Safety Jim Phillips announced that after switchboard hours all calls will be going to Public Safety. Their office will also be moving to the old music building this summer after a temporary 22 years in room 022 in Holloway Hall.

The position for the Chairman of Finance and Economics, which has been vacant for some time, will be filled by a professor from Clemson University, which was announced by Beebe.

Also discussed: athletic teams cannot raise their own funds, book buy backs, the wrestling team being canceled, switching female and male houses in Dogwood Village, and an increase in usage of computers in the business curriculum.

Many of the misunderstandings were resolved at the forum. The SGA will do follow ups on anything which is necessary.

The forum, intended to be one and a half hours, lasted over two hours with Beebe staying later to answer questions.

SGA Junior Senator Byron McCrae said, "Next time, we may shorten the list of administrators and/or have two or three different forums."

semester 1982 to Fall semester 1991, overall enrollment at SSU has increased 38.2%. However, black enrollment has increased by only 19.1 percent.

The failure has been attributed to two primary factors. The first is a decline in the black student applicant pool due to a reduction in the number of college-bound high school graduate and a decline in financial aid support for black students.

Dr. Edward Steffes of the Sociology Department believes this is a legitimate problem as the black population has been hit extra hard by tough economic times. Leon Burks, associate dean of Admissions, affirms the problem of strained resources. "Scholarships haven't been able to keep up with the rising costs of tuition."

The second factor attributed to the failure is the local alternative, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore. Located only 13 miles from SSU, UMES is a historically black institution with a "focus on service to minorities" that enables it to "attract the majority of black students going to college from the local service area."

In addition to attracting black students, SSU also has had a problem retaining them.

The significantly different retention rates for blacks and whites illustrate the problem.

Eighty-seven percent of white students returned from this past Fall semester to this Spring semester. At the same time, only 73% of the black undergraduates returned.

Some attribute the difference to the racial climate on campus. "The acts of intolerance we see in the Flyer all the time don't help," one student said.

"I would think it would be hard to go to a school and be such a minority. I can understand why they don't stay," said another.

The present integration plan is slated to be in effect until 1995.

SGA holds meeting

The Student Government association is holding a meeting April 26 at 6:00 pm in the Pocomoke Room of the UC.

Also, the SGA is sponsoring a candlelight peace ceremony. The purpose of this ceremony is to promote campus unity and a feeling of tranquility. It will be held on Monday, May 4 at 8:30 on the steps of the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. Everyone is invited.

Jewish Student Association sponsors Passover dinner

On Thurs. April 23, the Jewish Student Association will be sponsoring a Passover Sedar dinner. All are welcome. For location and time, please contact Pamela Rosen at 860-9220 or Mitch Kavalsky at 548-4275 (on-campus 84275).

Outdoor Club plans hiking trip

The Outdoor Club would like to request your presence on the next ODC trip. We will be having another fun-filled weekend trip hiking in Shenandoah National Park, Va. We will be climbing Old Rag on April 24-26. If interested, sign up at the meetings at 9 pm in Nanticoke room A in the UC.

Adult Education scholarship available

The Alpha Sigma Lambda Adult Education Foundation is offering a $600 scholarship for the 1992-93 school year. Students must be 24 years of age or older, have a GPA of 3.2 and completed at least 30 semester hours at Salisbury State. For applications, please contact Agata Liszkowska at 543-6313. Due to national requirements, the deadline for turning in these applications is May 10, 1992.

Visual artists to visit campus

A variety of local and regional businesses and individuals in the visual arts will be available to discuss their professions on an informal basis at the second annual Art Professionals' Market. The program will be held on Wed. April 29, from 9 am to 9 pm in the Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Computer Services needs student monitors

The Department of Computer Services will be accepting applications for the position of Student Monitor for the Fall 1992 Semester. Any student who has successfully completed either COSC 112, COSC 120 or ISMN 111 may apply.

The application procedure is as follows:

- (1) All students must complete a job application with Work Experience and receive a referral card.
- (2) All students must complete the Department of Computer Services Student Monitor Application. These applications can be obtained at the Student Monitor's desk in Fulton Hall, Room 140 beginning, Monday, April 27, 1992.
- (3) Students should complete the application and attach the Work Experience referral card to the application. All applications must be returned to the Department of Computer Services Receptionist to be dated.
- (4) Students will be contacted by the Academic Programmer for interviews. Students will not be considered if they have not completed the application, do not have a referral card or the application is not dated.

Piano classes and lessons offered in Fall

Piano classes and private lessons are being offered this fall semester. There are several levels with various meeting times. Anyone interested in Class Piano or Applied Piano Lessons, please contact Linda Cockey in the Music Department (Fulton Hall-Room 242).

The Brothers would like to take this time to congratulate Brothers Stephen Honerkamp and Jeff Richardson on receiving our two highest awards the chapter level hat were given out at our Spring formal. Stephen won our "Brother of the Year" Award for his overwhelming commitment to not only our brothers but in the I.F.C. as well. Jeff won the "Alfred Kovner Award" that is given to person who most symbolizes our brotherhood. A third award was introduced this year, the "Louis Bravman Outstanding Award." This award is given to any member of the community or faculty who cares enough about our fraternity to give of him/herself to help us in time of need.

We would like to thank the 130 plus who signed up to donate blood on Thurs., April 23 to the Blood Bank of the Eastern Shore. If all that signed up can attend and donate, we will be part of the largest blood drive in Eastern Shore history. The Blood Bank wanted us to remind you that walk-ins are welcome anytime between 10 am and 3 pm.

Softball season is here and once again Pi Lam has two teams competing in the Campus Rec league. The B-team has brought its record to

BEST COMEDY

Speak Out--a student news publication that voices the opinions of SSU students? Yeah, right. SAVE THE CHICKENS, Nick.

BEST DRAMA

The Bravman Issue--I don't agree, but I think that its great that students are so involved in a cause in which they really believe. If we could harness the energy generated by the Bravman matter and use it in campus programming and problem-solving, just think of the things we could do. The potential is awesome.

BEST DIRECTOR

SATS--the group Students Against the System did a tremendous job in organizing the rally and mobilizing

The Flyer is proud to announce its first annual SAMMY awards. We can't afford to give all of our winners golden SAMMY statues, so this editorial will have to do. The SAMMY award is our way of saluting the events and performances that highlighted (and "low"-lighted) the past two semesters.

student support. BEST PERFORMANCE Dr. Bellavance--He really is a nice guy. His statements at the SGA Faculty/Student Forum, however, have exposed him as the slyest political actor this side of Ronald Reagan. He's quick to have you to his house for cake and ice-cream and is sure to tell the press that he is concerned about students and his relationship with the students; but when he starts talking about his "image" and says he will no longer discuss a matter which has most of the student body upset, we have to begin asking ourselves "Is Dr. Bellavance sincere about the things he says or is he just acting that way?" Well, I think the award speaks for itself.

Letters to the Editor

Don't place blame

Dear Mr. McBride, You want everyone to become a member of one race, the Human Race. This will not happen if people continue with a "my race contributed this, yours destroyed that" attitude. If we are to become one race, the entire race must accept responsibility and praise for its contributions and mistakes. Laying blame will not bring peace.

Heather Carr

Let's move on

Dear Editor, Every semester the student body chooses and hops on some band wagon, blows the issue out of proportion and beats it into the ground. Fall of 1990 and Spring of 1991 was berated by the Gulf War. Fall of 1991 saw the defense of Dawn McCrumb and here we are, Spring of 1992 and this Bravman thing has become beyond annoying.

First of all, Mr Bravman took his position knowing full well that he was a contractual employee on a year to year contract. Frankly, I never knew who the man was until a friend pointed him out to me while at the Circle Bar. Of course the students want to keep him around. Opinion would dictate he's a great partier! He may even be an excellent teacher; however he is not a Ph.D. The more Ph.D.'s the school has on staff, the better accredited and viable the school becomes. So the time has come to leave the mutilated, beyond dead and buried horse alone. Lets find our new cause, shall we?

While I'm on a roll, I would like to address the article in the April 14th edition entitled, "President Bellavance declines student invitation to meeting on Bravman issue." Now, I am just about the most liberal and pro-democratic student around but I must defend the establishment for the first and most likely last time. Who could blame Dr. Bellavance for not attending? If he had walked through those doors he would have been torn apart! Do you honestly think he is deaf, dumb and blind? He hears you, he sees your protests. He has also made a by-the-books, would-have-done-the-same-for anyone-when-their-time-came decision and is standing firm. I wouldn't have voluntarily thrown myself to the wolves either.

Just one parting though, decisions need to be made for the betterment of the whole. And, yes, sometimes the

Students do support

Friends,
Many things have been said about the lack of support by SSU, but my experience in March would of changed this opinion. I had been hospitalized for two weeks with a ruptured blood vessel in my right kidney and the outpouring of support I received was tremendous. I would like to thank the Residence Life staff, professors, residents of Wicomico, men's lacrosse team, men's and women's basketball teams, The Flyer staff, and the many friends that visited or called. I wish I could express to each one of you how much the cards, balloons, books, cookies, and fish meant to me. Thank you so much for your thoughts and prayers.

Gratefully Appreciative,
J.P. Gourley

P.S. Thanks for my remote control car!

Happy, Happy!!

Dear Fellow Seagulls,
We, the venerable musicians of P.N.D. (Pleasant Natural Disaster), would like to thank the cats, birds, squirrels, ducks, and students of SSU for being so fluffy.

We also have an idea. How about weekend intramural tournaments to keep students around? That would be groovy. We like bunnies. Well, most kinds, but all of them wiggle their noses just so Woo!!

We of P.N.D. would also like to thank the plants and flowers for being so diverse, even though all the pollen makes us sneeze a lot.

Oh well! At any rate, we of P.N.D. hope that the natural, cuddly, warm, yumminess, of all the silly-willy critters somehow floats past all the yucky flatulent and smog that sometimes comes from the big, cold, concrete tax-factories.

Happy, Happy!!
We of P.N.D. thank you...
J., A., M., and B.

Affirmative Action

Affirmative Action was developed to help minorities move ahead in society. Although well-intentioned it may not be doing what it is supposed to and is definitely not performing it's task without side-effects.

As mentioned in the last edition of the Flyer some of these side-effects include, the promotion of racism, the degradation of blacks, and making blacks feel inferior. Like a great deal of theories the Affirmative Action theory is not all it is cracked up to be in real life. Yet it is still sold to us everyday by the school administration and the liberal elements in our government.

Besides the real life situation we must consider the strain that quotas put on our American business. The issue of fairness and creating a competitive work and school environment is important here. When we have a system instilled that accepts based on race we are not getting the best man for the job and this means we aren't producing as much as we could. As the world becomes one market this idea becomes more and more important. A quota system is not good for the people of this country, the business of this country and in turn is not good for the U.S., as a whole.

How Do You Feel About Jeans Day?

By Jeremy Magorka

Amy Black, Sophomore- Even though I am not gay, I am proud to wear jeans on Jeans Day because I believe everyone is entitled to the kind of lifestyle they want, love will transcend ignorance.

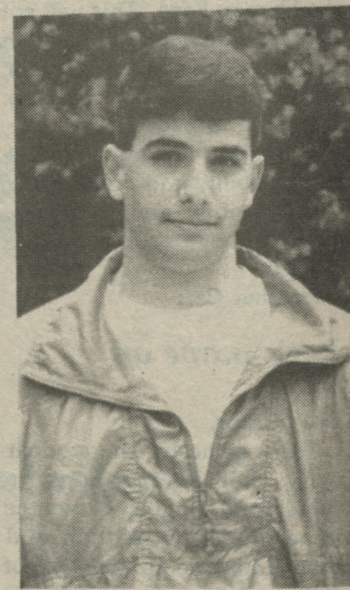

Chris Johnson, Senior- I believe Jeans Day is actually working for gay support, because it makes everyone do the exact opposite and influences the whole campus.

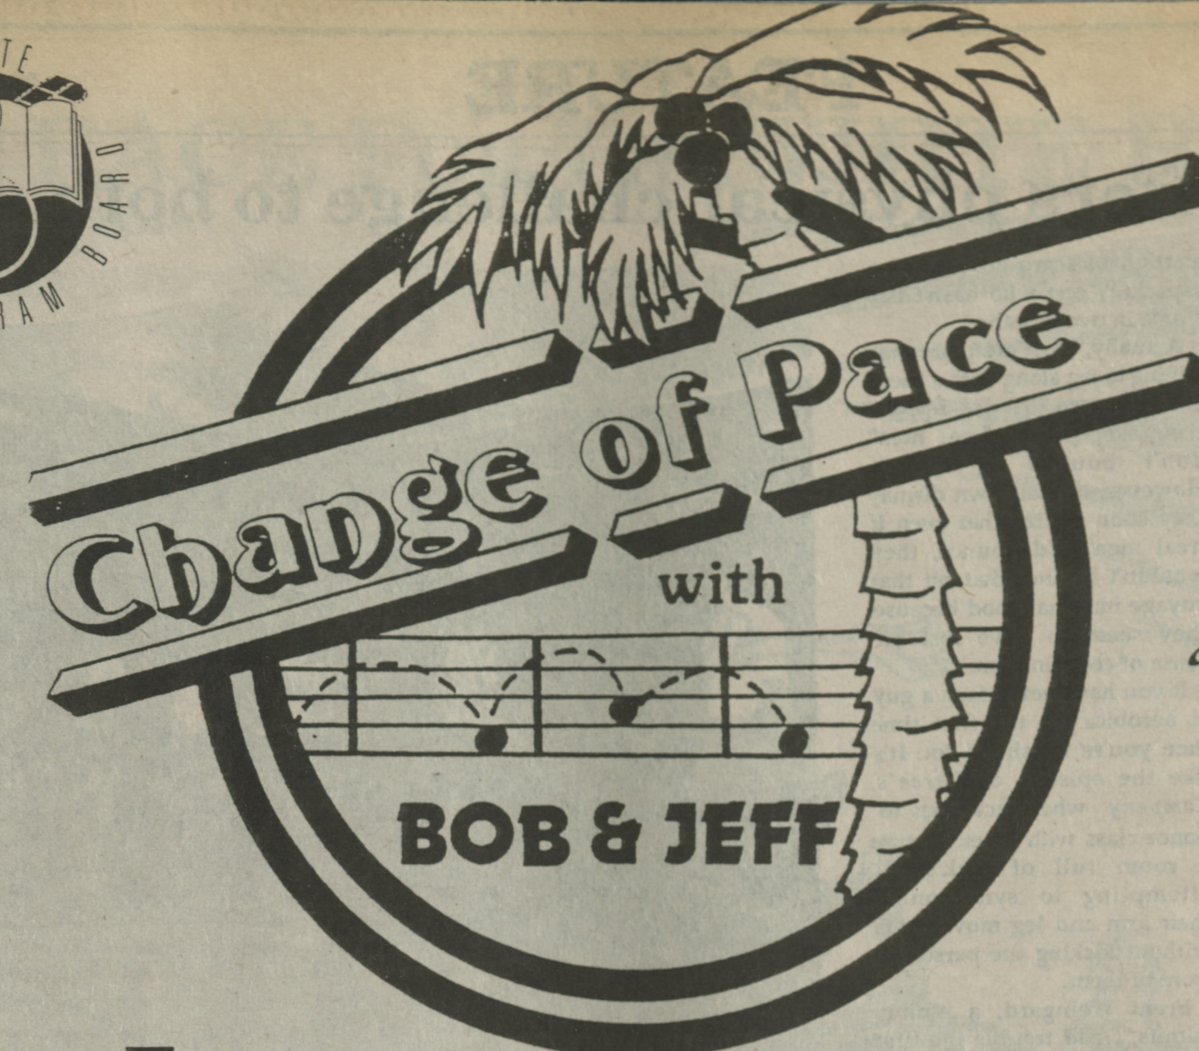

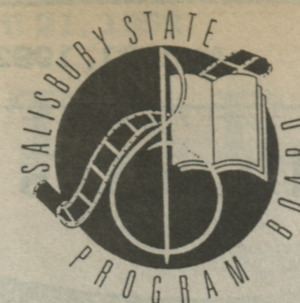

Chris Robinson, Senior- I feel very positive about it. I hope everyone will respect others' choices and that this day will expose the wrongness of assumptions, which we all make and for which we all need to be held accountable.

Michele Saunders, Junior- Everyone has the right to express him or herself, and if having Jeans Day is important to some they should have that right as long as it's not a crime.

Louis Sigalas, Freshman- I think Jeans Day is just a day to make people feel uncomfortable. If you want to make a stand, do ribbons or something else.

Aerobics offers physical challenge to both sexes

by Michelle VanNess, feature editor

Some men have a great tendency to brag about their physical appearance and condition. They boast of having the muscle power to bench press 350 and claim to have the rare ability to run five miles without the need for a "second wind."

Why then are so many men hesitant to venture into the predominantly female world of aerobics? According to old beliefs, aerobics is too wimpy for the big, bad bulked up male. Obviously, they've never tried the workout that is considered to be one of the best cardiovascular exercises available to women and to men.

Even though the secret about the benefits of aerobics is out, there have still been only a few men daring enough to enter the small Maggs gym and walk around the dozens of sweaty female bodies to find a place in the back where they can hide while participating in this exercise.

B.J. Keefer, the Monday and Wednesday instructor declares, "I don't believe the guys think of it as a good workout, or as a physical challenge."

Another plausible theory for why men don't go to aerobics has to deal with fear. The fear of making a total fool out of oneself in a room full of members of the opposite sex is enough to scare off any guy, especially one who hasn't had a date in two months.

Actually, most are more than willing to tag along with a friend at least once just to support their theory that "real men" don't bounce to music. However, to their own dismay they soon realize that even if "real men" did bounce, they wouldn't be included on that voyage into manhood because they seem to have lost all sense of coordination.

If you have never seen a guy at aerobics for the first time then you're missing a lot. It's like the episode of Three's Company when Jack goes to dance class with Janet. Picture a room full of Jack's all attempting to synchronize their arm and leg movements without kicking the person in front of them.

Brent Weingard, a junior, admits, "I had trouble the first couple of times, but I've caught on. It really improves your coordination."

On a more positive note, the craze is catching on and a few more gutsy men are starting to crawl out of the woodwork to challenge themselves and to eliminate the old stereotype that aerobics is only an exercise for the female gender. When speaking of this stereotype Weingard beautifully states, "That's archaic thinking."

He continues, "I've tried this before, it's a great workout. It is much better than riding a

Although many men have begun trying aerobics, they are still highly outnumbered.

machine."

Todd Meredith, a recruit of Weingard, after attending his first session, managed to mutter, "It was killer. It was very intense."

Keefer comments, "I think barriers are starting to break down. More sports teams are starting to use it as cross-country training."

Of course, they are still a few macho men that refuse to ever do anything considered remotely sissy (that may be Richard Simmons fault, he is definitely not the most masculine fellow to walk the face of the earth).

However, the growing consensus among the male masses is that if you can live through one session of aerobics without collapsing or making a complete idiot of yourself then you have proven yourself capable of handling a real workout.

In case any guys are wondering, the girls may laugh, but for the most part they like to see men trying aerobics. One sophomore reveals, "I think it's cool when guys come to aerobics. It shows that they aren't too macho to try something different."

For anyone who wants to take the aerobic challenge, sessions are held Monday - Thursday beginning at 7:30.

DYEwitness fires green dye on potential attacker

by Heather Holland, feature writer

It can happen to anyone.

Who hasn't ever walked home from class after dark, or come home to an empty house at night, or crossed a deserted parking lot after hours? The fact is, anyone can be a victim of rape or violent crime.

Women, especially, are at risk — some studies report that as many as one in six women will be raped by the time they graduate from college.

A new product called DYEwitness is being touted as "the criminal identifier," a substance that can halt an attack while simultaneously marking the attacker for future identification.

Contained in a small hand-held device similar to a mace can, DYEwitness is capable of firing a 70 lb blast of green dye onto an attacker from up to seven feet away. The non-toxic dye creates immediate burning and tearing to allow the victim to escape, while the resulting green stain drips, foams, and remains visible for up to seven days for easy tracing and identification. The ingredients of DYEwitness will not permanently harm the assailant.

DYEwitness does not require a license or permit, and will be replaced free of charge when used in an emergency situation.

DYEwitness was invented by Canadian policeman A. James McCreary. Frustrated by the suffering of rape victims and the fact that 80% of all criminals are never apprehended because the cannot be identified, McCreary decided to find a solution.

After seven years of complete dedication, DYEwitness was created. McCreary has been contacted by over 20 countries interested in making DYEwitness available to its citizens.

Since its arrival in the U.S. just seven months ago, DYEwitness has been embraced on countless radio shows, news programs and talk shows, including the Oprah Winfrey show.

Important to realize, however, is that DYEwitness only works if held in readiness at all times — a mugger or rapist will not wait while the canister is dug out of a purse or glove compartment.

If used wisely in potentially dangerous situations, chances are good that DYEwitness is adequate protection against attempts to rob or molest. If nothing else, DYEwitness is peace of mind.

DYEwitness can be ordered for $29.95 plus $2.00 postage and handling. To order, or for more information, write: Excursion/ Box 11667/ Santa Ana, CA. 92711.

★THE RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE★

"ACTUALLY, I WAS HOPING FOR ROSS PEROT!"

Waiting for Perot

Twelve years ago, John Anderson received 5,551,551 votes in his attempt to become president of the United States. ★Anderson was an independent presidential candidate in the 1980 election. He got on the official election ballots of all 50 states by petitioning for the signatures of individuals who did not vote in the presidential primaries. ★At this very moment, Ross Perot is trying to do the same. Perot, a billionaire profiled by the likes of 60 Minutes, Time, and even USA Today, needs to collect 800,000 signatures in order to get on the states' ballots. ★Campaign analysts are confident that Perot will be able to collect enough signatures to be an officially recognized independent candidate. They are unsure, however, of what impact he will have on the race. ★As scandals continue to fan the flames of voter dissatisfaction, Perot could very easily gain attention and support just for being new and alternative. But how long will he retain that support once voters hear his views on abortion (he's pro-choice) or taxes (more taxes on the wealthy)? ★According to the April 20 Time, Perot would finish a comfortable third if the American public were to vote today. When asked "If the election were held today, for whom would you vote?" 40% of the Time respondents chose George Bush, 25% of the respondents chose Bill Clinton and 21% of the respondents chose Ross Perot. ★Perot's finish isn't bad considering that his campaign hasn't really even begun. For now, he is just concentrating on getting his name on the ballot. Once that goal is achieved, it is hard to imagine or fathom what kind of campaign he can run from his personal wealth. ★At this point, little is known about Perot's actual campaign. It looks as if the American public will have to do a little waiting to see what he has up his sleeve. ★So until Perot gets a chance to really spice things up, the nation's collective attention shall stay focused on the short list of presidential wannabes. ★As an institute of higher education, SSU should be very interested in the campaign, particularly in what the candidates have to say about education. This special section offers a variety of election features geared towards the University campus including a story about student campaigners, a story on a student running for president and an election ballot unique to SSU.--Byron McCrae

Also in the USSA survey, Brown said he would support House Resolution 271 and Senate Resolution 236, which ask President Bush to rescind the Department of Defense policy barring lesbians, gays and bisexuals from military service.

Because students frequently utilize the military as a means to pay for college, the issue has come to the forefront on campuses nationwide.

Brown advocates the introduction of sophisticated technology to the classroom. "There ought to be a computer on every student's desk in America," he said.

College students help with campaigns

Florida, student response has been gratifying. "I think in terms of campuses, not in terms of numbers of students," said Miki Tait from her Tallahassee office.

"College students are so important. It's been a good turnout," she said.

Like the Democrats,

Republicans are claiming that student's interest in their party is at an all-time high in 1992.

Steve Satran, 26, executive director of the College Republican National Committee, reports that student interest in his organization has grown dramatically over the past decade.

"We are the largest youth-based and the oldest political organization for young people. This year we celebrate our 100th anniversary."

Satran, a graduate of Marquette University, says that hundreds of students packed the New Hampshire Bush-Quale headquarters, and in spite of Pat Buchanan's impressive showing in the primary, they were in good spirits and confident of reelection.

"College kids are concerned about jobs," Satran said. "I believe they are putting the blame for the recession on a Democratically Controlled Congress."

Clinton to establish trust fund on the ACT test.

Clinton said in a Chronicle of Higher Education survey that he wants to simplify the student-aid program "by eliminating banks from the process and making direct loans to students through their colleges and trade schools."

According to the Chronicle survey, he also said he advocated affirmative action so that "every young American will have access to a college education, no matter what their background."

Clinton said he agreed with resolutions pending in both the House and Senate that would ask President Bush to rescind Department of Defense policy prohibiting lesbians, gays and bisexuals from military service. because many college students look to the military to help pay for college, the issue has come to the forefront.

Clinton said he supports more accurate national testing standards "that will help us measure the achievements of our students and tell us in what areas we need to make greater efforts," according to the Chronicle's questionnaire.

"However, no student in good standing should be denied access to college, and grades should not be the basis for providing student aid. As President, I will introduce legislation to provide universal access to college for anyone who desires a college education," he said.

Bush, Buchanan consider grants, political correctness

such service.

With regard to political correctness issues, Bush says he adamantly opposes the movement. "On too many campuses, an atmosphere of real intolerance for dissenting or unfashionable political opinions has developed," he said in a White House release, citing speech codes, one-sided curriculum requirements and limited guest lectures as part of the problem.

He expanded on his concern about PC in The Chronicle: "It's ironic that at the same time the rest of the world is throwing open its doors -- and universities -- to democratic values, some U.S. student are being prevented from sampling the wares for a free and open marketplace of ideas.

"Intending to correct past injustices, political correctness all too often has the effect of replacing old prejudices with new ones."

Concerning overall education issues, President Bush has focused attention on his America 2000 initiative and his Head Start programs. By the year 2000, the president said he hopes that every adult American will be literate and have "skills necessary to compete in a global economy and exercise the rights and responsibilities of citizenship."

Campaign staff for Pat Buchanan, Bush's chief Republican opposition, did not respond to repeated requests for background information on his views on higher education or to requests for an interview with the candidate.

However, Buchanan released the following statement about his views on public education:

"American education is in a state of decline, largely the result of an ever-increasing education bureaucracy, and a lack of competition within the system. From affirmative action in hiring, to busing for racial balance and assaults on uniform, standard testing, too much ideologically motivated experimentation has been inflicted on public schools.

"To revitalize American education, we need vouchers to allow parents to send their children to schools of their choice. this will create market pressures on education at the local level to produce what students need most -- real learning.

"In addition, local education officials need the authority to hire and fire teachers and the

TV season concludes, Flyer rates Top Twenty

by Byron McCrae,

The television season recently drew to a close with 60 Minutes, the perennial news power from CBS, topping the list of highest rated programs of 1991-1992.

The television season has traditionally run until mid-April of each year. It was announced this year that NBC would no longer do so, but, instead, calculate ratings through the summer.

NBC was second in the overall ratings race. CBS made a historical jump from third place last year to first place this year with an average 13.8 rating/23 share. NBC was second with 12.3/20, ABC third with 12.2/20 and Fox fourth with 8.0/13.

Fox's The Simpsons was its highest rated show, coming in 33rd in the season end rankings. The Flyer, however, would rank The Simpsons much higher. See "The Flyer Top Twenty" and "1991-1992 Nielsen Rankings" to see how your favorite shows did.

Emmy contenders previewed

by Byron McCrae,
editor-in-chief

Now that the television season is over, the Emmy campaign can get underway. Awards will be handed out in late August, and new shows have promise.

Brooklyn Bridge is an industry favorite well received by critics. Home Improvement is no. 5 in the year's rankings--with such widespread appeal, the show is certainly Emmy bound.

The absence of China Beach, Gabriel's Fire, and thirtysomething leave the dramatic categories wide open. Critically acclaimed new series such as ensemble drama Homefront and I'll Fly Away will challenge LA Law for awards previously won by series that are now canceled.

The Emmy nominations, to be announced mid-July, should look something like this:

Gulls Lax set for "War on the Shore"

by Jody Madron, sports editor

The stage is set for The Rematch. The War On the Shore. The Eastern Shore Battle for Supremacy. The Game With Too Many Nicknames. (Is Don King promoting this game?)

Yes, the much-ballyhooed men's lacrosse battle with Washington College is this Saturday on enemy turf.

Last year, Salisbury State flat-out embarrassed the Shoremen, winning 20-4. (The Bore On the Shore?)

It was the final game of the regular season for the Gulls, who finished up with an unblemished 13-0 record.

Normally, however, the game is not a blowout, but last year was much different. Last year's Sea Gull team was destined for greatness. They came within just one goal of a national championship, coming closer to ending the Hobart dynasty than any team before them.

Last season, the Gulls featured a team of superstars. Rick Berkman, Eric Ungleich, and Rusty Pritzlaff were the Sea Gulls' three leading scorers. A quick calculation reveals that the three of them accounted for 55 per cent of the Sea Gull goals last year. This year, they haven't scored a single goal (they were all seniors).

This year, the Sea Gulls have gone about things differently. The big question mark before the season began, obviously, involved replacing all those goals lost to graduation.

The answer has been a balanced, consistent scoring attack paced by Jeff Chenowith, Kevin Hohner, and Art Morley. Although those three lead the Gulls in goals, they account for just over 40 per cent, thus making the attack more balanced.

The strength of this team so far has been its defense. Last year's USILA defenseman-of-the-year, Mike Esham, has anchored that squad, with significant help from Chris Andrews, Gary Falor, Scott Petrie, Ed Berry, and John Russell. The defensive midfield, in fact, had to endure losing Hohner mid-way through the season

Morley gets game winner for Gulls

by J.P. Gourley, sports writer

The stretch drive is on. The Salisbury State men's lacrosse team has two games remaining on their schedule before the road to the final four at the University of Pennsylvania begins.

The Sea Gulls closed out their regular season home schedule last Tuesday and dominated St. Mary's (MD) in every facet of the game. SSU vacuumed up 67 ground balls to St. Mary's 42. Salisbury State also won 19 of the 30 faceoffs and unleashed 69 shots to St. Mary's 19.

The St. Mary's goalie recorded 16 saves but also let 25 shots get by as the Sea Gulls pummeled their in-state rival by a final score of 25-4.

It was just another day at the office for senior attackman Kevin Hohner. He handed out six assists to go along with two goals.

Jeff Chenowith and Todd Cliggett had three goals each and Chris Boyle did the same Salisbury State is set to go stick-to-stick with Shoremen of Washington College this Saturday.

but he added two assists as well.

Senior Eric Modesitt recorded four goals for Salisbury as they recorded their largest margin of victory on the year.

Freshman Tom Murrell started in goal for Geoff Sanders who is nursing a hand injury.

"I had to step in and do the job because of the injury to Geoff," said Murrell. "He (Sanders) really supported me and that really helped me concentrate."

Murrell only recorded seven saves in the contest because of the tremendous pressure put on by defensemen Mike Esham, Scott Petrie, Gary Falor, Chris Andrews, and John Russell.

SSU played without Sanders in goal and midfielders Ben Berquist and Dave Webb. Cliggett and Keith Malfa joined Bob Callabritto on the second midfield unit and SSU did not miss a beat.

On Saturday, the Sea Gulls traveled to Pennsylvania to face the seventh-ranked team in the nation, the Bullets of Gettysburg.

In an emotion-filled game played on a soggy, slippery field, the Sea Gulls prevailed in overtime, 13-12.

Things did not look good early for the Sea Gulls, however. Gettysburg scored the first three goals of the contest, and held the Gulls scoreless through the first quarter of play.

SSU came out fired up to open the second, though, and scored three goals in a span of about 40 seconds to tie the game. The last of those goals was scored when a Gettysburg defender threw the ball back to his goalie. SSU's Eric Modesitt slapped the goalie's stick, however, and the ball rolled into the net and tied the score at 3-3.

Gulls break out of offensive slump

by Jody Madron, sports editor

When the Salisbury State baseball team opened up their copy of The Flyer last Tuesday, they could not have been happy.

They saw a headline and story about how the team was unable to get the big hit and drive in runs.

Well, something must have inspired the Gulls that day, because they went out and hammered Washington College, 14-2. Salisbury State exploded for 13 hits and left just seven men on base on their way to the victory.

Three home runs powered senior pitcher Doug Burig to the victory. Brad Rickards led the offensive barrage for SSU by going two-for-five with a triple and a home run while scoring three Sea Gull runs.

Burig pitched the first three innings, striking out two and walking none while allowing no base hits. Junior Tom Keating followed with three one-hit innings while striking out four, and junior Don Rera finished up with five strikeouts in the final three frames.

Sophomores Dave Shull and Jeff Garrett also each went two-for-five, and Garrett led the team with three runs batted in.

The Gulls next faced Christopher Newport on Thursday afternoon, and again put on an impressive offensive display. The team belted out 12 hits and scored 12 runs on their way to the 12-2 victory.

Shull and junior outfielder Dave Harris did most of the offensive damage this time. Shull was two-for-four with a triple and two runs scored. Harris was also two-for-four and scored a run while driving in two.

"The hitting is finally coming around and we're starting to peak," said Harris. "Hopefully, we'll be able to keep the momentum as we go into our conference games."

Freshman Ed Stephan also had a fine day at the plate, doubling and scoring two of the team's twelve runs.

"After winning two straight, the team is confident," said Stephan. "We're hoping we can close out the season hitting the ball this way."

Sophomore hurler Jeff Garrett went seven innings and struck out seven for the Sea Gulls as they defeated Christopher Newport, 12-2.

Jeff Garrett was the beneficiary of the 12-run outburst, picking up his first win of the season on the hill. The sophomore right-hander went seven innings, allowing six hits while fanning seven.

The Sea Gulls took their improved 7-12 record to Western Maryland on Saturday for a doubleheader with Frostburg State.

Erin Green shatters records for Sea Gull track squad

Senior breaks SSU mark in the 3,000

by Joe Herman, sports writer

At the midpoint in the 1992 track season, Salisbury State's premier female athlete, Erin Green, has already shattered two school records and has set her sights on attaining three more before her illustrious career comes to a close.

On Saturday April 11, Green ran 4:53 in the 1500 meter run (two seconds short of the school record). Then she ran her best time since ninth grade in the 800 meters (2:25), which qualified her for third place.

Then, with only a half hour of rest, she topped the old school record in the 3,000 meter by two seconds with a time of 10:54.

Two years ago Green, originally from Rockville, MD, transferred from Montgomery Junior College and the record books have been altered ever since.

In the last two years, Green has been MVP for both cross country and track. She has also been named to the All Mason-Dixon conference and the Eastern States Athletic Conference squads for a number of events.

This fall, Erin Green was the first woman in Salisbury State history to be named to the All Mid-East region for cross country, while leading the team to a conference championship.

Many athletes would be content with ending their career with these accomplishments, however Erin Green isn't quite finished just yet.

"Everything has been going good so far this season," cites Green, "but this is my last year of eligibility, so I'm shooting for everything."

Before hanging up the spikes, Green plans to qualify for nationals in the 3,000 meters, break Ann McKenzie's 1,500 meter school record, and if she gets a chance, top the 10,000 meter record.

"Erin is very strong and confident," expresses head coach Jerry Thomas. "She had a successful season last year and she's running even better now."

When Erin Green first came to Salisbury State two years ago, there were only three women on the track team. She passed up an athletic scholarship in Florida to run for Salisbury.

Men's lacrosse win streak at nine fed it to Ary Morley.

Morley then took his man one-on-one toward the goal and fired a shot into the upper corner of the net, sending the Sea Gulls home victorious.

Morley led the Gulls with five goals on the afternoon, and got a bucket of ice-water dumped on his head for his troubles. Hohner, Chenowith, and Modesitt all scored three goals, while Chenowith led the team with a pair of assists.

Geoff Sanders returned to the nets for SSU and survived a 40-shot barrage. The senior goaltender made 23 saves on the afternoon.

SSU outshot the Bullets, 50-40, and led in faceoffs, 13-11. The Sea Gulls found themselves battling back from numerous penalties during the game, yet nonetheless held off the disciplined Gettysburg squad.

The win set up this

Saturday's "War On the Shore" against eighth-ranked Washington College in Chestertown, MD. That game is set to start at 2:00 p.m., and as always, a contingent of SSU fans should make their presence known.

The Shoremen (9-2), held off number fifteen Washington & Lee, 16-10 Saturday and will be looking to avenge last year's 20-4 thumping by SSU.

Salisbury State is presently ranked fourth in the nation by the USILA, with Ithaca still claiming the third spot and Hobart and Nazareth at one and two.

Hobart and Nazareth squared off last week and the Statesman from Hobart came away with a 13-12 victory.

The NCAA Tournament Committee selects the top eight teams in the country to play in the single elimination tournament.

Gulls, Shoremen to match up this weekend of a majority of the team's key players.

The incident involved drinking on team trips, and it nearly ruined the tradition-rich Washington College lacrosse program. Head coach Terry Corcoran has done a great job in controlling the damage, thus keeping the program strong. In fact, with Saturday's win over number 15 Washington & Lee, the Shoremen improved to 9-2 and are ranked eighth in the nation by the USILA.

Two lacrosse powerhouses, both of whom barely resemble the teams that met last year, will square off again this Saturday. Surely, coach Corcoran will bring up last year's embarrassing loss as a motivational tool for his team. And you can bet that coach Berkman will remind his team that this year's Washington College squad is much different than the team they faced last year.

There will be a great deal at stake on that field this Saturday, including bragging rights for Eastern Shore lacrosse. The only thing this game needs is a few more nicknames.

Green will stay with the Gulls next year.

"I wanted to go to a school where I wouldn't be pressured to excel," said Green.

It seems that Salisbury State has been a perfect choice for Green. Not only has she demolished the record books, she's also majoring in education, where she presently carries a 2.8 grade point average.

Despite all of her accomplishments, Green never acts as if she is above anyone else on the team. Dorothy Dean, who also runs the 1,500 meters stresses "she is so awesome, but she's never arrogant."

Although Erin Green is in her last year of eligibility, she has decided that she will be an assistant coach for cross country next year.

Jamie Rallo adds, "She's a sweet person, and she'll be a wonderful asset to the coaching staff next year because she brings out the best in everyone on the team."

Women's lax squad now at 7-4

by Joe Herman, sports writer

Last Thursday, in a game where many of the players wished their lacrosse sticks were umbrellas, the Salisbury State women's lacrosse team crushed Washington College by a score of 20-11.

At the outset of the game, SSU had their patented sluggish start by falling behind Washington College by a score of 2-0. But, halfway through the first half, Salisbury's attack caught on fire and pulled ahead 8-6 on Jean Rusen's backhand goal.

At the end of the half, the small scoreboard showed Salisbury on top 11-7. In the half, Flossie Owens and Cheryl Ish led the team with three goals each, while Joanne Fotia led the team with two.

In the second half, the rains came, and with it Salisbury played like the Washington College goalie was the culprit, by thrashing the net with a spurt of five goals in nine minutes.

The Sea Gulls never looked back, and ran away with the victory, 20-11. Flossie Owens led the team in scoring with six goals, while Cheryl Ish enjoyed her birthday by netting four goals and collecting three assists.

Joanne Fotia finished the game with four goals, while Kim Benz and Jean Rusen controlled the midfield and combined for five goals and three assists.

"Our offense is so well balanced, that when we click we're unstoppable," replied Owens. "We're so effective because the defense always finds a way to get the ball up to us."

The defense was effective as usual, as Regina Zippel, Kim Johnson, and Cindy Hudson shut down Washington attackers before they could get a shot off. Kris Hart finished the game with 19 saves and kept Salisbury in the game.

On an overcast afternoon Saturday, the Sea Gulls faced off against the Bobcats of Frostburg State. Surely, head coach Dawn Chamberlin had to be hoping for either rain or snow, because this team thrives in bad weather.

Unfortunately, however, the heavens did not cooperate, and the Sea Gulls fell to Frostburg, 11-10.

Flossie Owens led the Gulls with five goals, while Joanne Fotia added three. The Gulls outscored the Bobcats 6-4 in the second half, but could not overcome the effort of Frostburg's Julie Jaeger and Maggie Murphy, who each scored four goals.

The win kept Frostburg State undefeated on the season at 12-0. Salisbury State fell to 7-4, with just one game remaining before the Maryland State Tournament this weekend. The Gulls will hit the road to face Mary Washington on Wednesday at 4:30 p.m.

Track & Field

The men's and women's track team both captured honors at last Saturday's (April 11) Invitational Meet hosted by Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C.

The Sea Gull men outdistanced an 11-team field with 96 total points, while the SSU women scored 130 points to edge second-place Catholic by five points.

Jamie Rallo took first place in the shot put (45'7") and javelin (152'), third in the discus (140') and fifth in the 100 meters (11.3 seconds).

Tim Smith posted wins in the 5,000 meters (16:13) and in the 10,000 (35:18).

For the ladies, Erin Green won the 1,500 (4:53) and the 3,000 (10:54), besting her old school-record in the 3,000. She was also third in the 800 (2:25).

Kirsten Owings won the triple jump (33'6") and ran on the winning 4 x 100 relay team.

The Gulls returned to Washington, D.C. last Saturday (April 18) for the Catholic Invitational. They will host the Sea Gull Invitational this Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

Cycling Club

The Salisbury State University Cycling Club performed impressively at the Extreme Circuit Race in Columbia on Sunday, April 5. Out of a field of 24, David Van der Vossen placed first while Paule Loverme took fourth and William Nichols picked up fifth.

from the Gulls.

Don Rera suffered the loss in the first game, as the SSU lost, 12-5. Brad Rickards and junior infielder Scott Lowman each went two-for-four, and Lowman knocked in three Sea Gull runs. It was not enough, however, as Frostburg State pounded out 13 hits in the game on their way to the win.

The nightcap was not any better for SSU, as Frostburg State pounded out 12 more hits, while winning 6-0. Doug Burig took the loss for the Gulls, who managed just two hits offensively. Frostburg pitcher Kelly Hawkins struck out six and walked two for the 'Cats.

The Sea Gulls will try to improve on their 7-14 record this week when they travel north to face Wilmington College on Thursday. SSU will host a doubleheader this Saturday against Shenandoah, with a 1:00 p.m. start time.

Salisbury State golf club offers something for everyone

60-member club plans tips and trips

by John Urbanowicz, sports writer

When you first start a semester at college, there are a myriad of clubs or groups that are looking for members. You can go Greek, cycling club, dance club; the list can go on forever. However, there is a new club here at SSU that people really don't know about that might interest you.

This is the first semester for the Salisbury State University Golf Club. The club, which consists of approximately 60 people, gets together and plays golf at the local courses.

"We are just aiming to get it going this semester, but next semester we are going to plan trips and have more of the area's pros come out to help teach," said vice-president Eric Burkett.

The club is not just open to students. There is a pretty even split between the amount of faculty and students that are involved with the club.

One also need not worry if you do not have the golf talent of a seasoned pro. This club is looking for people with a zeal for the sport.

"We sometimes match up beginners with some players who have been playing a while so they can teach the game to the players that have just started," added Burkett.

The club has only played once as a unit this semester, but they have a few more tee-times on their minds before we all head home for summer.

"It just gives people who really like golf a chance to meet others who also enjoy to golf," cited Burkett. This scenario that they have set up is good because it gives a people a chance to meet others that they can set up golf times with.

To sign up, one must only go down to the campus recreation office and fill out a form. They are looking for more members, so you are encouraged to come out and join.

So, you do not need to have the 5-iron ability of a Gary Player or a putter-turned-sabre like Chi Chi Rodriguez to join this club. All you need is a want to go out and play a little golf.

Who knows? Maybe the club can help you with that hook or slice. Maybe they can help you lower your score from sounding like a middle linebacker's weight to sounding more like a jockey's weight. You could also tell your mom that you joined a club at school that's going to have you spending more time with your professors. Just don't tell her you will be out cruising on a golf cart.
